From this novel an episode of a German television series followed on average by 5.6 million viewers.

The third novel in a series with the same protagonists.

The Godfather
The Bolzano Thriller

In the midst of the beautiful landscape of South Tyrol, Commissioners Matteo Zanchetti and Sonja Schwarz must shed light on the death of a retired judge who was killed in his own home. During the investigation to find out who the murderer is, they also end up on the trail of a series of burglaries in places and houses whose alarm systems have been mysteriously knocked out. But that's not enough, a worker's body is found in a marble quarry. But who's behind all this? And what role does the mafia boss Francesco Rossi play?

The third investigation by the two commissioners who have been so successful among readers. The author is finishing writing the fifth novel that will see the same cops in action in South Tyrol.

Corrado Falcone is the pseudonym of a well-known German author. He has already published four novels under this pseudonym, which has received the approval of readers and critics. Two of his books, and this is one of them, have been scripted to make films that have had good success with the public and critics.
